Prestige of the Work of Art, and Privilege of the Artist.

New clause added to Code Napoléon, Paris, Dec. 2nd, 1897.

. . . "The artist is not even obliged to give his reasons for refusing to fulfil his contract! The artist is within his rights in refusing to do so, and electing to pay damages, and, in this case, he simply affirmed this right when he refused to give up the picture." . . .

Summing up of the Avocat Général de la Republique, on behalf of the Government.

. . . "Amending, reforming, legislating anew, say: that the engagement between the parties being but a simple obligation to execute, shall, from now out, resolve itself, in case of non-execution, into a question of damages only (and the returning of the money received), and shall leave the artist absolute master and proprietor of his work until such moment as, at his own good pleasure, he shall decide to deliver it, and give up the holding thereof."

Jugement of Monsieur le premier President à la Court d'Appel, Paris, Dec. 2nd, 1897.
